The Alma Mater is not just a song we sing.
This song is a special song that is sung after every event. This song expresses the deep emotional ties we have formed at Norcom High School with our friends and teachers. When we sing this song, our pointer finger is raised, which signifies the pride we feel for our school. Our school is the best.

Shelby Boyd welcomes the new Greyhounds to step in and become part of a school that is "A Step Above the Rest".

I. C. Norcom High School is a well-respected school that generates a positive atmosphere. The students, faculty, staff and parents are filled with pride, school spirit, and academic vigor.

Israel Charles Norcom, for whom the school was named, was an African American who graduated from Yale University. He became a principal in the Portsmouth Public School System. Because of the tremendous example he was and because he was a living example of the level of intelligence to which we all can aspire, the school was named after him.

In Norcom's memory, the present I. C. Norcom Greyhounds set their goals high and achieve them. Students from Norcom are and have been Presidential scholars, students of prestigious colleges, and recipients of millions of dollars worth of college scholarships. The student athletes at Norcom also go on to colleges with full scholarships. They are prepared not only for college, but also for the real world. Norcom students have been active members of the Portsmouth community. Some students have also acquired skills in fashion design, drafting, electronics, and auto body repair. When students graduate from Norcom, they leave prepared to face the challenges the world sets before them.

Because of the rich heritage, extreme pride and school spirit, and high potential of its student body, Norcom High School is "A Step Above the Rest".

Crystal More and Derrick Watkins pose. They were Mr. and Miss Homecoming 1992.

Lavonda Graham and Adrienne Granger wait anxiously for the outcome of another football play. They were both members of the varsity cheerleading squad.

Steppin' To

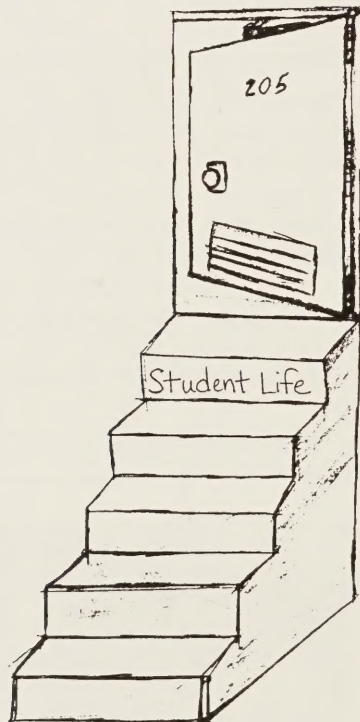

The everyday life of the average student who attends Norcom consists of six long 45 minute class periods and one study period. During lunch and the four minutes between classes, the students step to their own beat. This beat is known as "Student Life".

Life for many students involves the six famous journalistic questions - Who?

What? When? Where? Why? and How? In a nutshell, students thrive on gossip. Who's going out with whom? What did you do last night? When did you get home? Where did you go over the weekend? Why were you with him/her? And by the way, How does everyone else know all of this?

In Michelle Sills' estimation, "To gossip is to live divinely!"

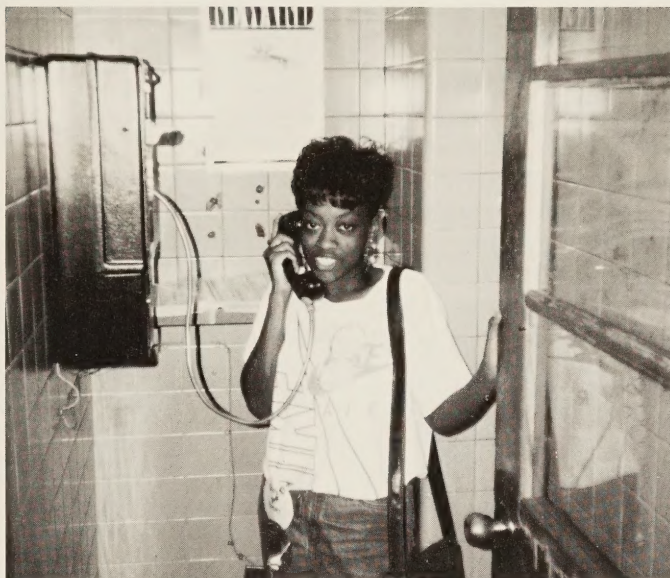

Although student life thrives on gossip, the students never forget that the purpose of attending Norcom is to strive for excellence and to achieve.

Tonia Copeland, a marching Greyhound, runs to her car after the pep rally. She had to get everything straight for her performance at the game that night.

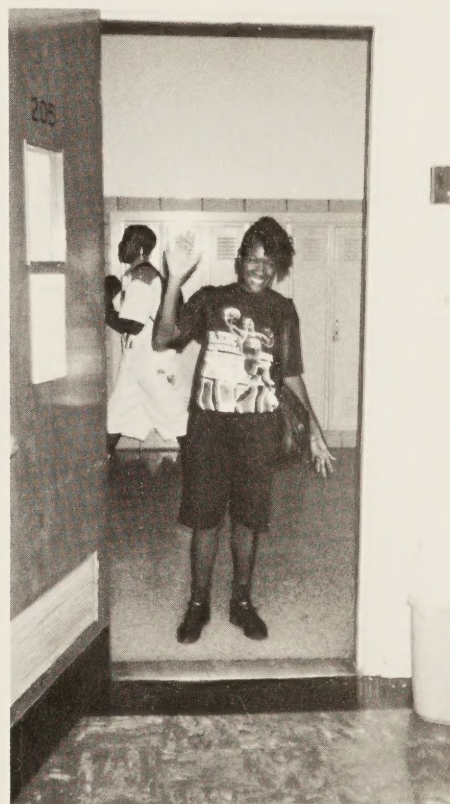

The Norcom Beat

During lunch, Shanika Theus uses the phone to check on things outside of school. She was eager to finish her conversation and get to class on time.

Harold Dubose, Maceo Thomas, Gary Clemons, Carlton Edmonds, Lamont Burns, and Lavar Bowers sing the Alma Mater following a pep rally. They were following a cherished tradition of singing the song together after a rowdy pep rally which helped to prepare them for the game against the Indian River Braves.

Keisha Townes stops to say hello to Mrs. Welsh on the first day of school. Many students said hello to teachers and friends that they did not see over the summer.

A New School Year

In September, the students, faculty, and staff began a new school year. As usual, the summer vacation went by fast, everyone had to get down to business again.

This year, however, there were more students at Norcom than before. Cradock High School was closed in the spring of 1992, and some of its students and faculty transferred to Norcom. Several changes were made at Norcom, including the renaming of the school library to the "Admirals' Library". For some students, the changes caused an awkward adjustment period, but everyone eventually coped with the situation. Overall the situation was a positive one. Since Norcom used to be a school that people from all over the city could attend, many of the students already knew each other.

Another specific change was that the administration had to schedule a three-lunch period day to accommodate all of the new students. Everyone had to get used to hearing more bells during third and fourth periods.

New students, such as freshmen and former Cradock students had to get used to the organization of the school so that they could move quickly from classes to lockers in the allotted time.

Since Cradock students and faculty were unhappy with the closing of their school the previous year, they had to constantly remind themselves that this experience would not be the same, and they should not expect things to be the same way they were at Cradock. The Norcom students and faculty had to change some of their expectations, too. Norcom students had to empathize with their classmates, and welcome them into the ranks of Norcom. This experience of being able to give and take in the situation was a good learning experience for everyone, a reminder that we all have to do the best we can with whatever situation we are faced.

Sophisticated seniors Alisa Saunders, Alina Saunders, and Shanika Theus tease Sherie Theus. Sherie was a freshman, and she nervously tried to make it through the first day of school.

This is one of the new changes to Norcom. Several classes were repainted, carpeted, and given computers.

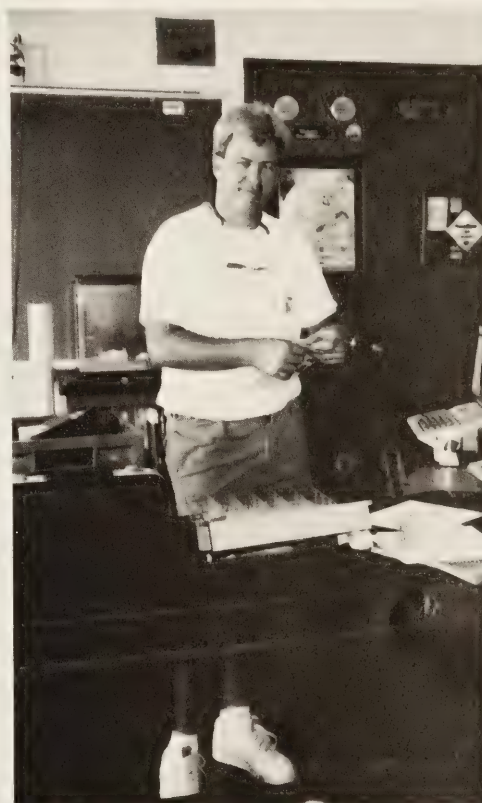

Former Cradock students and Norcom students come together as one big student body as everyone converses in the hall. Nathaniel Williams, William Bethly, Lamont Frazier, Vernon Carney, Keith Burks, and Carlos Johnson found their way around Norcom the first day of school.

More students crowd the halls of Norcom the first day of school. Norcom had so many new students, the administration had to change the schedule to a three lunch period day.

Mr. Gordon stands outside his classroom before class begins. He gave Madinah Vass and his other students some helpful advice.

Mr. Borick is eager to start off the school year. He and other teachers had to wash equipment and get other things ready for the students.

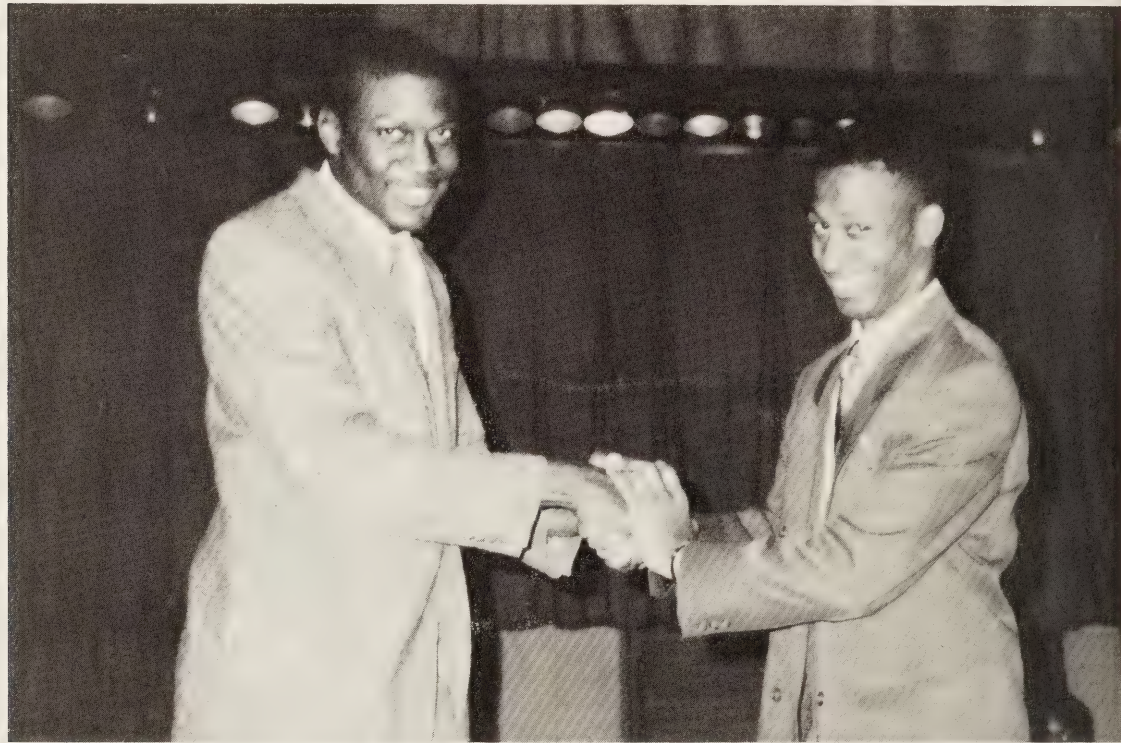

ELECTION '92: Mock Debates

In November, all the government classes performed a mock debate. The mock debates were followed by a mock election. The purpose of these two exercises was to give students practical experience in the democratic process.

"I learned a lot about him (Bush) that I didn't know before. By the time it was over, I felt some of his views, too," reflected Tonita Banks, who portrayed President Bush during second period (Mr. Smith's government class).

The mock election was held a week before the real election on November 3, 1992. Bill Clinton won the mock election at Norcom as well as the nationwide election.

—Tony Moore

Raynard Stith and Kavonzo Tyndall shake hands as George Bush and Bill Clinton would. They were representing Bush and Clinton in the Mock Debate.

Kavonzo Tyndall and David Smith shake hands before they started the debate. They represented Clinton and Perot.

Mock Wedding

The Marriage and Child Development Class held a mock wedding November 25, 1992. The purpose of this wedding was to give the student the actual experience of preparing and carrying through with plans for a wedding. The brides were Latrice Griffin and Crystal Roulhac. Latrice "married" Chris Waddler and Crystal "married" Alonza. To spare the feelings of their real-life girlfriends and boyfriends, the couples gave each other hugs instead of kisses.

The entire student body came to the wedding since it was the afternoon before the Thanksgiving holiday. Everyone had a chance to share the experience of a mock wedding.

Latrice Griffin, Crystal Roulhac, Chris Waddler, and Alonza McGlone pause for a prayer before saying their vows. They were the two couples from Mrs. Bell's Marriage and Child Development Class.

Groomsmen Chris Waddler and Alonza McGlone look as their mock brides walk down the aisle. The wedding was officiated by Reverend Earls.

An attentive Norcom student body looks on as Mrs. Bell's Marriage and Child Development Class engage in a mock ceremony. The wedding took place November 25, 1992.

Students Are Involved In the Community

Students at I. C. Norcom support the Portsmouth community in several ways. Mrs. Sabo's Marketing students and the SCA sponsored children during the Christmas holiday by donating toys, clothes, candy, and their time and love. Many students learned the true meaning of Christmas through their participation in these activities. Other students donated canned food for the Portsmouth Food Bank. Still others donated blood or bone marrow through the Red Cross.

Students were also actively speaking out and demonstrating their support of efforts to save the Chesapeake Bay by taking care of the Elizabeth River, an area that is within their control. The Oceanography class

Painted storm drains to tell people that when they dump oil, antifreeze, pet waste, paint, or other substances in the drain, they are dumping it into the Elizabeth River and the Chesapeake Bay.

Students at I. C. Norcom are concerned about their surroundings, and they are making a difference in their communities.

Gathan Robinson smiles as he gives blood. He acts as if he has done it before.

Mitzivilla Morrisett, Antonio Jones, and Lakeisha Rodgers sign up for a worthy cause: to give blood to help others who are in need of it.

Jesse McKay gives the nurse his attention, before he gives blood.

Alton Waddle looks a little unrelaxed. But the nurse gives him a warm smile and she gets his blood.

Public Affairs Officer Carol Prott, along with Mr. Griffin of the city council and Mike Kessler of CEBAF were present as Mayor Webb read a proclamation heralding the beginning of the Community Clean Water Board.

Richard Trotter, Jamal Whitehurst, Antwan Clark, and Mayor Webb watch as students paint the storm drain.

Students learned that the Chesapeake Bay Foundation and the Community Clean Water Board are trying to cut down on point and non-point sources of pollution, which include wastes that are dumped down the drain.

The Water Quality Fish was invented by the Chesapeake Bay Foundation and the Community Clean Water Board to remind everyone that their pollution directly affects living things, including themselves. Students posed with the Water Quality Fish.

Students With Cars

Many Norcom students own and drive their own cars. But with this privilege also comes responsibility. Some students have to get jobs to pay for their cars, or gas, or insurance. Students also have realized that one mistake could cost their lives or the lives of others. A serious issue among young adults is the issue of drinking and driving.

Aisha McCollum, a Norcom senior and also the owner of a 1988 Camaro, stated, "You shouldn't drink at all, but if you are going to drink, definitely don't drive, because it's like committing suicide."

Some students may think that it is cool to drink. Donna Mabry, an eleventh grader at I. C. Norcom and the owner of a 1985 Accord said, "I think peer pressure has a big effect on young teenagers' drinking habits, because in most situations, if your friends don't drink, you don't drink either."

The alcoholism plague has affected at least twenty-six million people (one in five are between the ages of thirteen and seventeen). We as responsible Norcom Greyhounds must drive cars like responsible citizens. We do not want any of us or our friends to become another statistic in the list of traffic fatalities.

Donna Mabry poses in front of her Honda Accord '85. She was happy that the school day was over so that she could head home for the day.

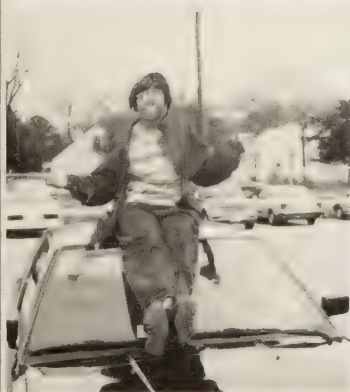

Linda Artise comes out of school to go to her car. She took good care of her Audi 4000.

Rayford Riddick shows that he is more than anxious to get into his '91 Sentra. He was one of the few students with a car phone.

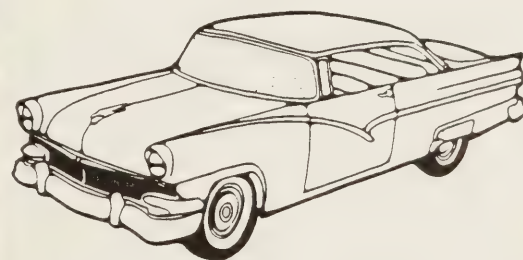

Damian Gray poses on his '89 Sentra. He showed that "VIBE".

Kelly Davis chills on her '89 Sentra. She looked like a model.

Michelle Sills gases up her '84 Buick every Tuesday morning. Her expression said, "Why do I have to go to school this morning."

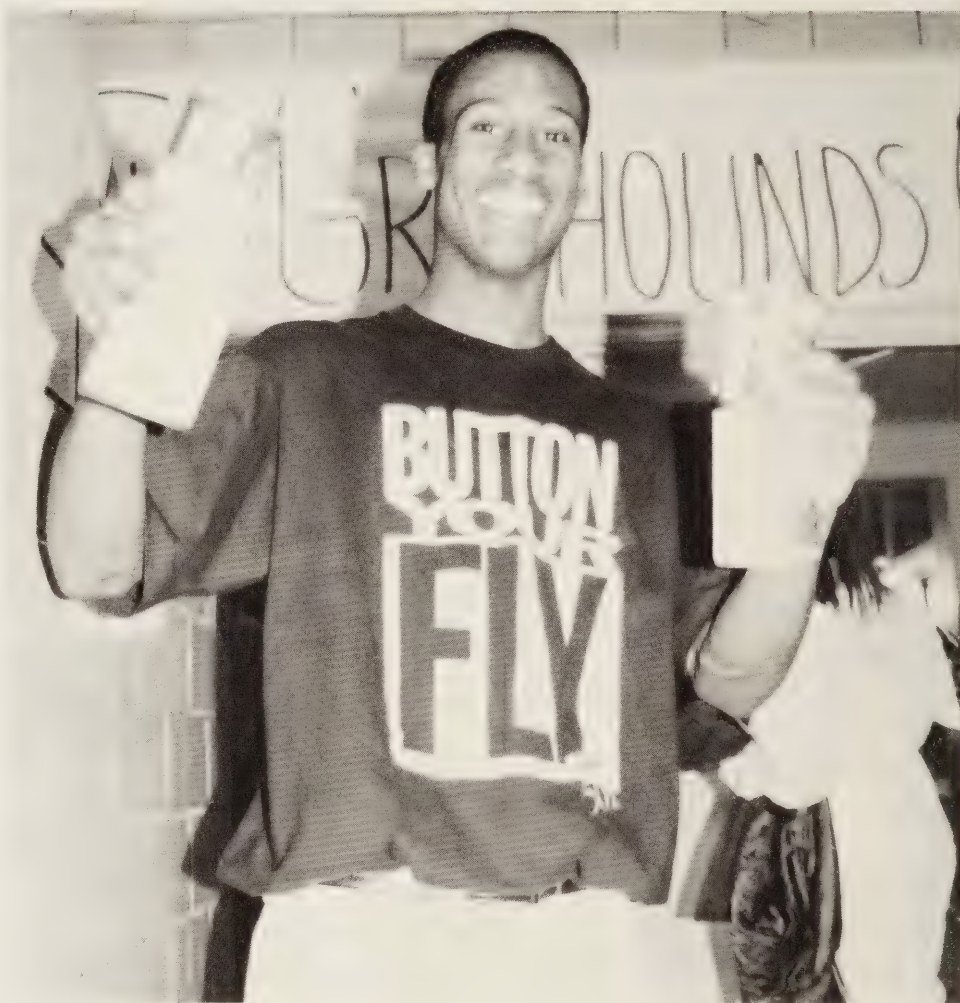

FUNKY GREYHOUND FASHIONS

Fashion is a big part of the lives of most students at Norcom. Students at Norcom are very fashion-conscious. They create their own unique styles. Some wear top-of-the-line name brand fashions such as: Tommy Hilfiger shirts, Guess, Used and Cross Color Sets, Nautica jackets, and Major Damage jeans. Some of the popular shoes that are worn throughout the halls of Norcom are Nike and Reebok tennis shoes, and Timberland boots.

Rhonda Bell, a senior, commented, "Fashion is a way to express your inner self to everyone else and also a way to state who you are and who you want to be. Without fashion, what could I possibly wear?"

Many parents support the fashion habits of their teenagers, but most teenagers have had to get their own jobs to support their clothes hobbies.

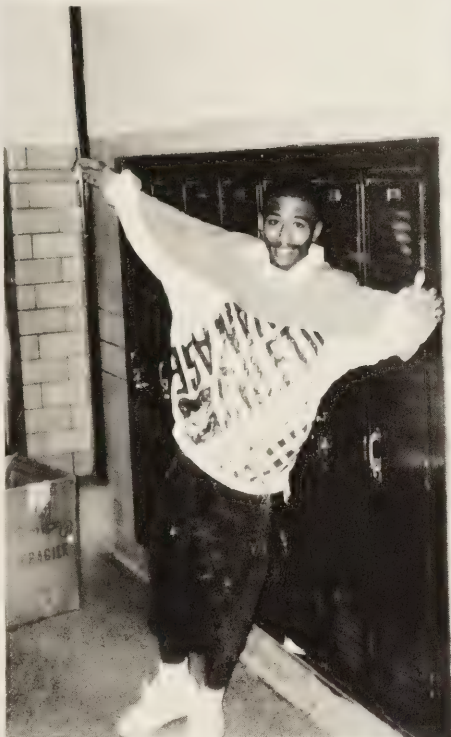

Ahmed Wadsworth contributes to the canned food drive. He was sporting a "Button Your Fly" shirt, made by Levi.

Michelle Hoskie, famous for "The Bun", models her hair style in front of her locker. The Bun was a popular hair style.

Ronald Thomas profiles a Nike shirt and the Baggy Guess shorts.

The fabulous trio of Melba Newby, Tracey Smith, and Felecia Delk definitely know what is in. They sported the "above-average-everyday-Norcom-look".

Sha-Juan Andrews moves to his next class. He sported his Sergio Tacchanini jogging suit.

The Homecoming ushers look absolutely divine in their beautiful gowns. Tierney Bentley, Shelly Crew, Roniko Richardson, Tenisha Beamon, Taybar Nixon, Luchana McCoy, and Jennifer Jacobs were ushers during the Homecoming Assembly.

David Williams and Laticia Vass sing sweet tunes to the Homecoming audience. The duo sang "Silent Prayer".

Homecoming '92 "IT ALL BEGINS WITH YOU"

At the Homecoming Assembly the students had a chance to show their talents. The theme for this year's traditional Homecoming Assembly was "IT ALL BEGINS WITH YOU". The students that took part in the entertainment sang beautiful songs and the student body loved it. One part of the entertainment was by a group called "Finesse," which was made up of Aisha McCollum, Julie Barnes, Cherie Hinton, and Keisha Rodgers. This quartet sang En Vogue's "Yesterday" and Boyz to Men's "It's So Hard to Say Goodbye". The crowd was taken away by the group's overwhelming harmony. David Williams and Tichia Vass also shared the entertainment spotlight as they sang to each other romantically before the crowd. Carlos Skinner shocked the crowd with his ability to sing so wonderfully.

After the entertainment had ended, winners for the Homecoming Court were announced. Keandra Johnson and Lonnell Wiggins won Miss and Mr. Freshmen. Miss and Mr. Sophomore were Candace Beamon and Dominic Scott. Miss and Mr. Junior were Tanika Hooks and Clarence Zimmermann. Candidates for Mr. and Miss Homecoming were Kimmeshia Randall, Alina Saunders, Crystal Moore, Michael Carr, Haywood Stowe, and Derrick Watkins.

The Homecoming Court looks radiant in their maroon and gray on Homecoming night. They were Mr. and Miss Freshmen, Lonnell Wiggins and Kendra Johnson; Mr. and Miss Sophomore, Dominic Scott and Candace Beamon; Mr. and Miss Junior Clarence Zimmerman and Tanika Hooks.

Crystal Moore and Michael Carr look great as they walk out on the football field. They were Homecoming finalists.

Derrick Watkins and Alina Saunders look dazzling in their outfits. They were finalists.

Greyhounds Win 37-0; A New King and Queen Are Crowned

Crystal Moore and Derrick Watkins proudly claim the title "Mr. and Mrs. Homecoming" 1992. Crystal was crowned by last year's Homecoming queen, Dawn Nixon and by Dr. Jeter.

Marcus Allen holds his pose until the number ends. He and the other band members wore their new uniforms during the halftime show.

On October 23, 1992, Norcom played Manor for its 1992 Homecoming game. Norcom's defense, offense, and special teams overwhelmed the Mustangs in a 37-0 victory, marking Norcom's sixth win for the season. Terry Ricks rushed over a hundred yards, bringing the crowd to its feet several times.

The band debuted in their brand new uniforms bought as a result of the alumni's fundraising. In the middle of their halftime performance, the band saluted the alumni by playing the "Norcom Rock", a definite crowd-pleaser.

Dr. Jeter crowned the new Mr. and Miss Homecoming, Derrick Watkins and Crystal Moore. First runners up were Haywood Stowe and Kimmeshia Randall. Second runners up were Michael Carr and Alina Saunders. Many students, parents, faculty attended the game, showing their support for the football team and the band, and making the 1992 Homecoming a success.

Edward Hebron and Gary Clemons shake hands, showing the relativey smooth merger between I. C. Norcom and Cradock High School. Cradock was closed after the 1991-92 school year and many former Cradock students attended Norcom during the 1992-93 school year.

Jason Earls, Alonza McGlone and Shelby Boyd cheer in the cafeteria. They lead an informal pep rally.

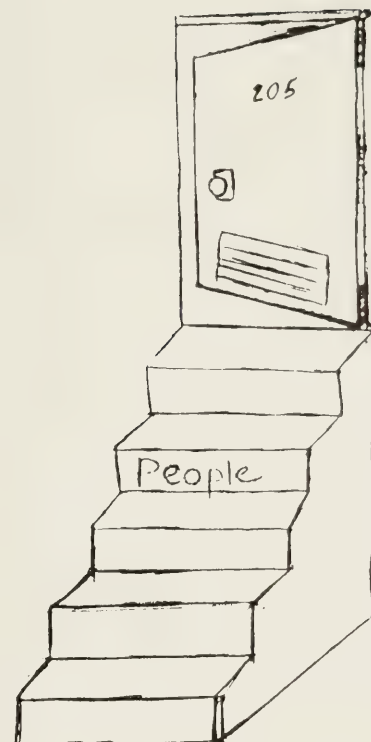

Jonathan Pierce, Vic Stith, Derrick Parks, and Darryl Lewis are having a conversation after school. They were waiting for the bus to pick them up.

Steppin' In, Steppin' Out

The students at I. C. Norcom High School are diversified, motivated school spirited people. The student body is composed of students from all over Portsmouth. This year many new students attended Norcom because Cradock High School was closed.

Stepping in are the freshmen and Cradock students because they are coming into the home of the Greyhounds, sharing the same pride and school spirit as other Norcomites. The sophomores and juniors are stepping up in the ranks of Norcom while the class of ninety three is stepping out. They are stepping out into the real world, ready for anything facing them, because they know that they have been well-educated and well-prepared in the mighty halls of I. C. Norcom.

Taybar Nixon and Tanisha Barnes are enjoying lunch. They and others were enjoying a brief diversion from classes.

JUNIORS

This year the junior class is concentrating on something that everyone should be focusing on - their futures. The next graduating class of I. C. Norcom is getting a head start on its future beyond High School. They have their sights set on academics. They are striving to raise their grade point averages in hopes of having unlimited college choices.

Many feel that their junior year is their hardest year because it is crucial in determining their class ranking. Some say they take the hardest courses and this is the first time most students attempt to take the SAT's. There is a lot of pressure on them to do well.

Many students hope to graduate with honors and some wish to graduate with at least a 4.0. The competition is tough, but the jammin' junior class of I. C. Norcom is indeed a step above the rest!

Sophomores

The sophomore class is one of the most diverse groups in the school. They are one step ahead of the Freshmen, and they have found their niches in the school.

Sophomores Melvin Cotton, Shana Rob-istow, and Willie Paige are very active in the marching band, symphonic band, and regional band. Octavius Brothers, Roder-ick Richardson, and Marte McCall are standouts on the varsity football team, pro-viding the team with the depth it needs to continue to be the best. Kim Hasty and Jancen Perry are premiere cheerleaders, adding pep to the pep rallies and inciting the athletic teams to do their best.

In all arenas, the sophomores are step-ping up to the challenge.

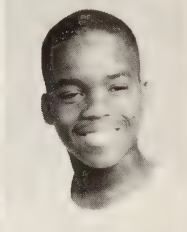

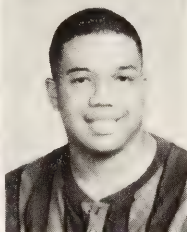

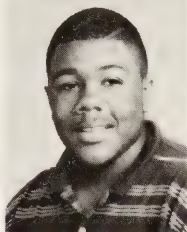

Nathaniel Williams copies down his objectives for the day in English class.

Teachers Attended Norcom in the Sixties and Seventies

Several teachers attended Norcom in the 1960s and '70s. These teachers are: Mr. Davenport, Mrs. Haywood, Mr. Holloway, Mr. Knight, Mr. Langston, Mr. Leathers, Mr. Nixon, Mrs. Short, and Mr. Williams. Each teacher eventually returned to his or her Alma Mater to teach. In addition to teachers who attended Norcom, there are other staff members who attended Norcom, like Mrs. Darden and Mrs. Leathers.

Mrs. Short graduated in 1963, and she participated in the band, played on the basketball team, was a member of the homecoming court, and was a debutante. According to Mrs. Short, working in Norcom has reminded her of "all the outstanding people who have walked these halls and sat in the same classrooms, and the fact that this building encompasses greatness on all levels."

Mr. Knight, who graduated in 1964, participated in the Forensics club, the Drama club, the track team, the Debate team, the Chorus and Concert Choir, and the National Honor Society. Mr. Knight said that the current I. C. Norcom student body evinces "that my alma mater is still number one."

Mr. Williams graduated in 1965, and he was a commencement speaker, a superlative (best dressed), a participant of intramural basketball, the football team, a staff member for the newspaper and yearbook publications, and his senior class president. Working here again brings back "my days as a student and athlete here, and my former teaching experience here (1969-71)," Mr. Williams explained. He is also "now teaching many students whose parents I taught in the early '70s."

Mrs. Z. Bell graduated in 1975, and participated in FHA/HERO, Modern Dance, Orchestra, and the Prom Committee while she attended Norcom. If she could change anything about Norcom, she said, "I would like the students to become more aware of how important each of them is without the designer names, expensive clothes, shoes, cars, and other things that seem so important to them now."

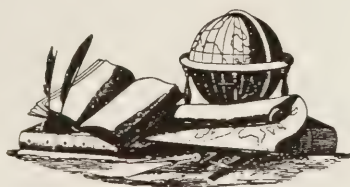

Even though times have changed and students have changed, the teachers who are alumni of Norcom feel that they are 'at home' here at Norcom High School.

Mr. Nixon and Mr. Knight both are alumni of I. C. Norcom High School. They both attended Norcom in the 1960s.

Mrs. Bell is a proud alumnus of I. C. Norcom High School. She attended high school in the 1970s.

Faculty and Staff

Ms. Sledge, one of two librarians, works with students and faculty. She encouraged students to use the computers.

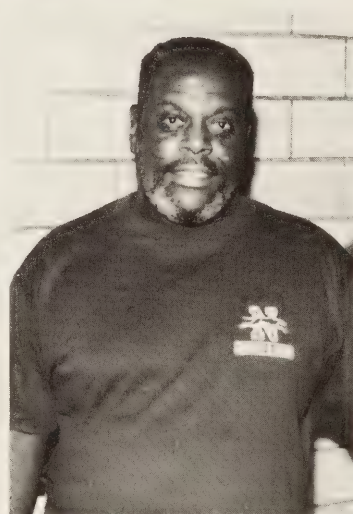

Mrs. Patrick always has a pleasant smile. Being the head guidance counselor, she helped to make sure the seniors applied for college, financial aid, and scholarships.

Mrs. Darden, Office Manager, and Mrs. Campbell team up to make sure everything runs smoothly.

Mr. Bracy, the Security Officer, patrols the halls. He encouraged students to get to class.

Mr. Griffin is on the Custodial staff.

Mrs. Haywood, another librarian, encourages the students to take advantage of her expertise. She and Mrs. Sledge worked overtime hours to accommodate the new books and the older books from the former Cradock High School.

Ms. Powell, Mr. Owens, Mr. Watford, Ms. Johnson, Mrs. Williams (Head Custodian), Mr. Drewery, and Ms. March make up the Custodial staff (Not Pictured: Ms. Muhammed).

Mrs. Valentine, the nurse, checks her daily check-in chart. Her clinic was a very busy place.

Mrs. Wright, the Guidance office secretary, handles some paperwork. She coordinated things for parents, teachers, and students.

Mrs. Coner, Vice Principal, handles concerns and cares with an understanding smile.

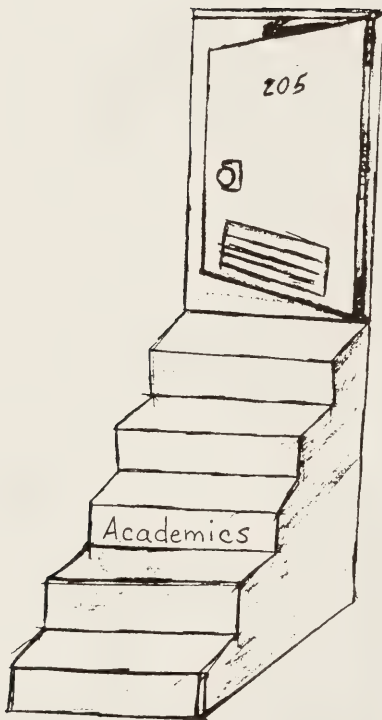

Ms. Moody, the library assistant, checks things in and out.

Mrs. Porter, Guidance Counselor, encourages parents and students to become involved with school (Not Pictured: Mrs. Barnett, Guidance Counselor).

Academics

At I. C. Norcom High School, students really do excel. The bond between the students and faculty makes the students want to learn more and more, to reach higher goals, and to achieve academically. It is up to the students to better themselves and to prepare themselves for the world after graduation. Every individual at I. C. Norcom will be prepared for life once they step out of their high school world and into the real world.

Perhaps Norcom's reputation for preparing students for the real world comes from the fact that it offers industrial classes. Such classes as Carpentry, Drafting, Electricity, and Exploring Childhood offer practical experience with materials and individuals. This practical experience furthers a student's economical and social welfare.

Although Norcom is supposed to become the city's magnet school for science and technology, perhaps it will not lose its practical, hands on approach to learning.

Tisha Smith practices playing the piano as Luchana McCoy critiques her. They were learning "cooperatively."

Extra Credit Requires Extra Effort

Why do students take foreign languages? Is it to learn about another culture, or is it just to get a 23-credit diploma instead of a 21-credit diploma?

Angela Jones, a Spanish II student, said, "I know many people that speak Spanish, and I want to understand when I'm being talked about. I enjoy learning the language of another country, but what I don't like is the hearing work involved."

Many students take foreign language classes in order to get the credit. Others want to learn of another language and culture.

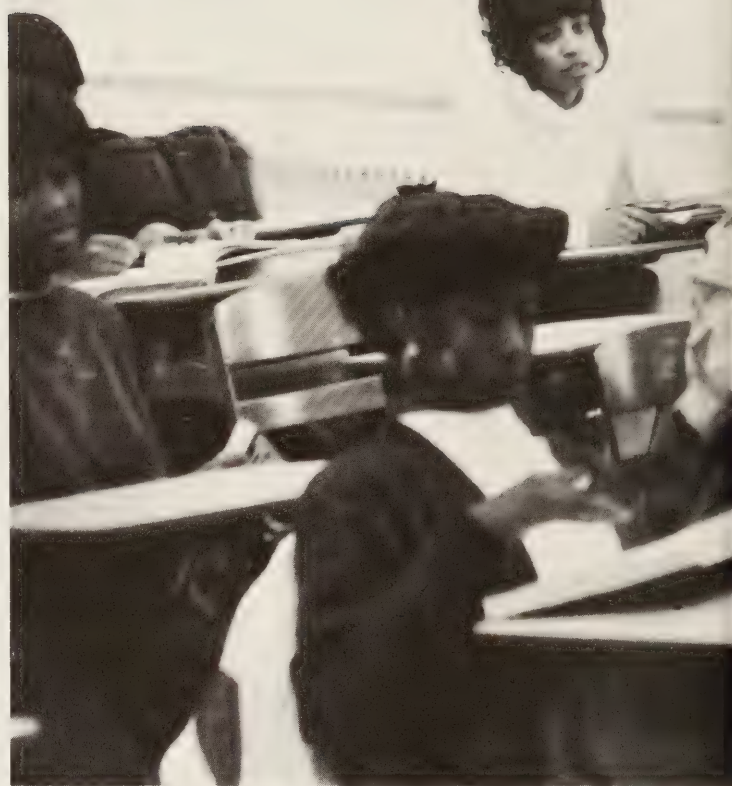

Several additional elective classes are offered in core areas. In the English Department, Public Speaking, Photojournalism, and Drama are offered. The Science Department offers Physics, Oceanography, and AP Chemistry and Biology. The Social Studies Department offers Sociology and AP Government. For students who want to get the most out of their high school experience, these elective classes or classes that require extra effort provide a greater challenge that requires more work outside of the classroom than normal classes require.

Antonio Sunkins creates his interpretation of student Hope Paige. He completed his painting project to fulfill a requirement in Art class.

The French class anxiously waits for its assignment.

Raynard Stith and Robert Fentress analyze pictures from magazines to get ideas for their projects. They were part of Mr. Nixon's Drafting III class during first and second period.

Kevin McMillan plans the houses of the future. Kevin, a junior, was also in Drafting III.

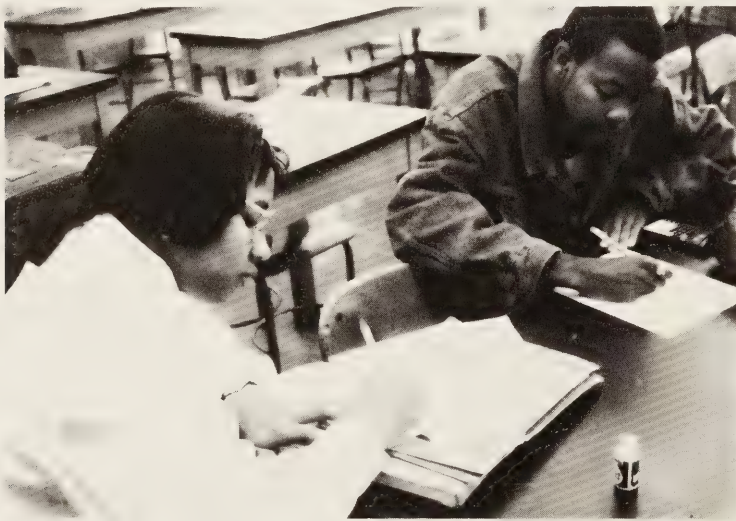

Betina Smith types her assignment quickly and carefully. The students were graded on speed and accuracy.

Science

This year there was a lot of excitement in the science department. Dr. Saunders joined the Norcom faculty, and together the science teachers worked to plan the Magnet School Concept. The plans are under way to convert Norcom High School into a Magnet School for science and technology.

In addition to faculty changes and anticipated curriculum changes, there was a change in the Oceanography program. Instead of recruiting students from all over the city, Mr. Borick only recruited Norcom students this year. These Oceanography students had the unique experience of going out to the field and collecting data on the Elizabeth River which would then be compared against data collected elsewhere from the Elizabeth River. From this data students could determine the origin of pollutants in the Elizabeth River. Pollution that is dumped into the Elizabeth River eventually makes its way to the Chesapeake Bay. Science teachers at Norcom taught the students the importance of reducing pollution in the Chesapeake Bay, which is a nationwide concern.

By planning labs and providing experience in the community, science teachers tried to provide a combination of practical experience and traditional teaching practices.

Mr Borick's Oceanography students visit Waterside to collect water samples. The students compared their data with that of nine other schools.

Don Goad, Billy Vick, and David Smith collect water samples. They kept accurate records of their results.

Jamal Whitehurst calculates information for his lab. He used formulas that were provided for him to solve problems.

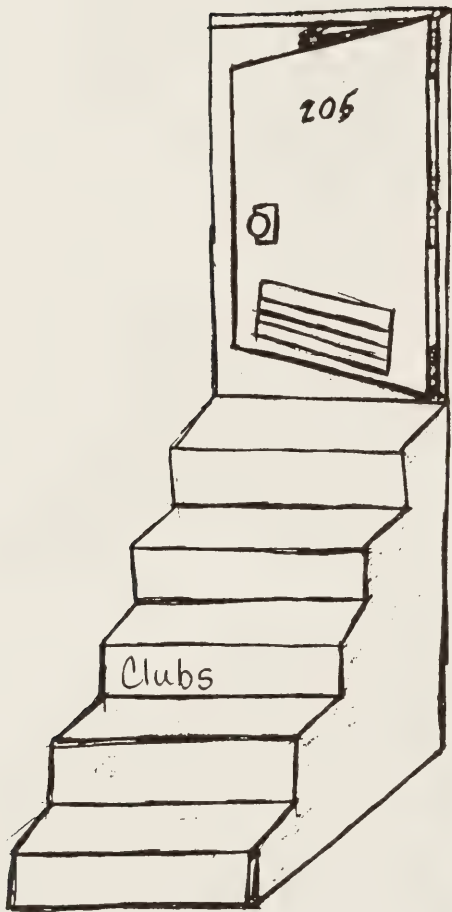

Sha-Juan Andrews studies the phases of mitosis.

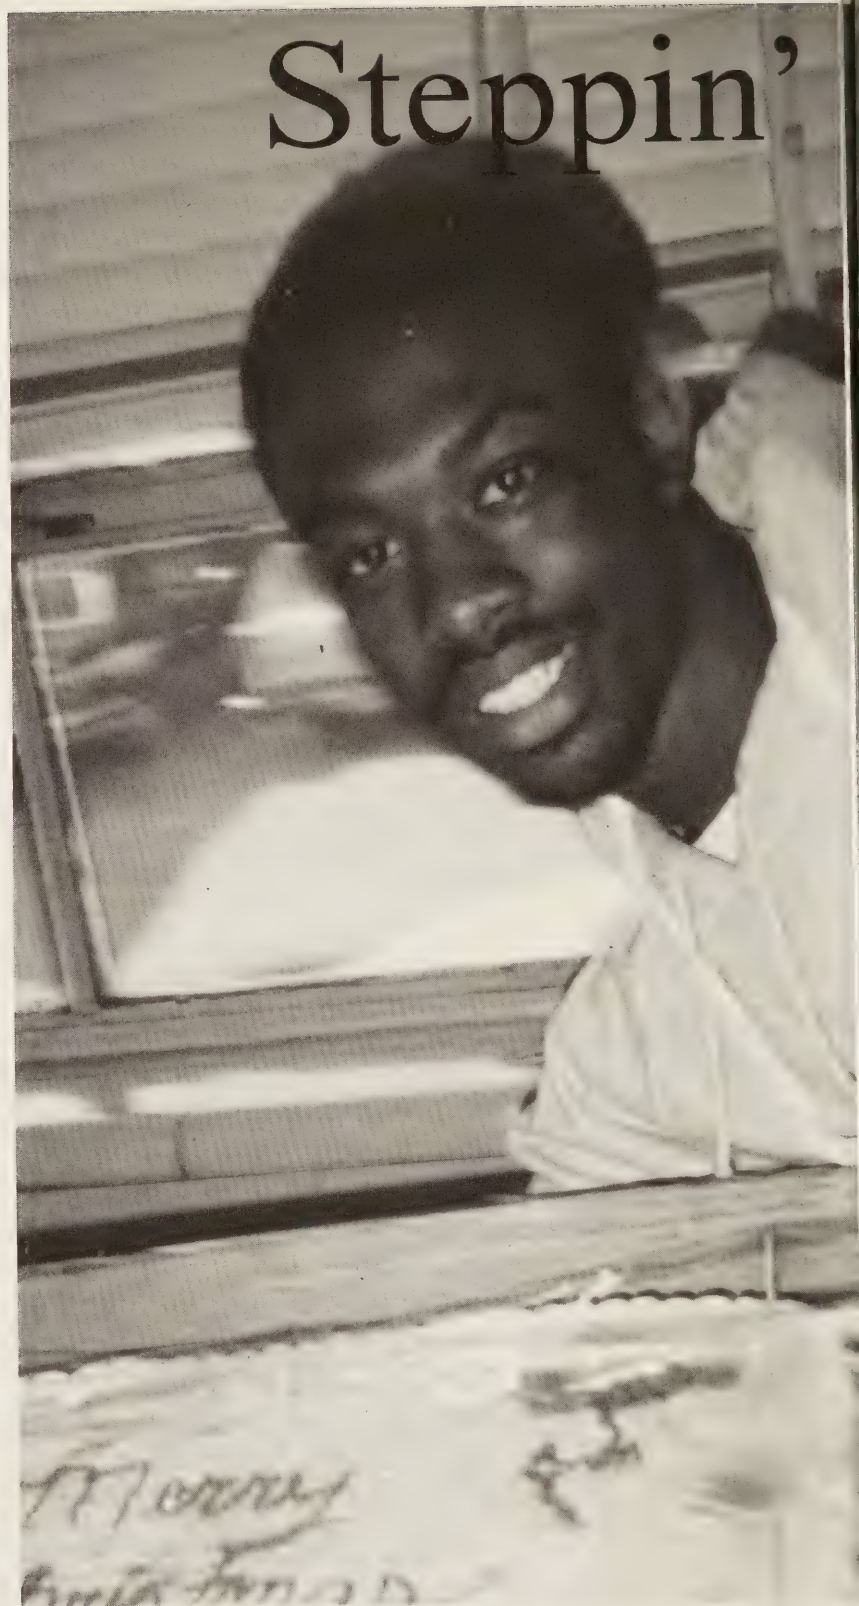

Mr. Borick's Oceanography class prepares for a class discussion. They were preparing for their field experience.

Don Goad and Billy Vick work together on a project. Many teachers stressed cooperative learning.

the Competition

This year was an exciting year for sports at Norcom. Terry Ricks smashed the district's rushing records, the football team won the Southeastern District Title, team members such as Sharonetta Rogers from the indoor track team qualified for the Regional Tournament, and the basketball fans witnessed exciting play from the basketball team, like the time Elgren Greene shot a three-pointer as the buzzer sounded to end the game, thereby pulling his team ahead by one point to win the game.

Meanwhile, other teams such as the golf team, the girls' tennis team, and the baseball team trained and recruited players to boost their overall standing in the district.

As a whole, the Greyhound athletes were a step above the other athletes in the area.

The Yearbook Staff

The members of the 1992-93 Yearbook Staff were enrolled in Photojournalism class, which met during first period.

The students learned the entire process of yearbook production, although most students found a certain part of yearbook production that they liked best. For instance, Bentley Harrell, naturally gifted in art, designed the cover of the book and drew the "Super Greyhound" and Step graphics that appear on the division pages. Demonica Mapp, always listening for "the scoop" completed entire spreads by herself. Senior Joe Cox, who had an eye for layouts, designed the layouts for the division pages. Tony Moore, Derrick Parks, Alonza McGlone, and Jerronne Coleman worked together to complete the sports layouts.

While all members were responsible for knowing terms and skills, they also were able to work independently to create a desired effect for their spreads. The students had the unique experience of planning, working, and collaborating on a yearbook staff.

Derrick Parks and Jerronne Coleman figure out how to organize the Basketball and Track layouts, while Harold Jones (below) plans the club section.

Martina Hagerman plans the club divider page.

Shawnta Woods and Bentley Harrell look back to last year's book to see how the Ads were arranged.

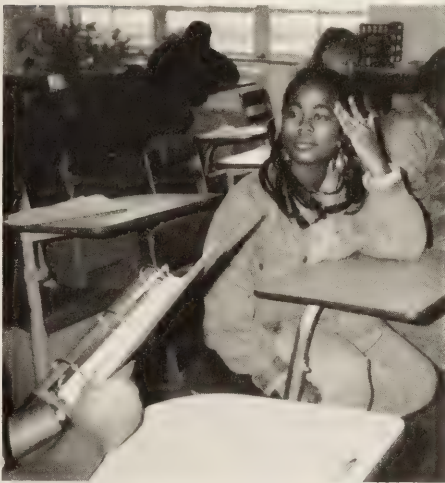

Melissa Jackson considers the suggestions of her partner for the page.

Tony Moore finishes some other work while his partner crops the pictures.

After identifying the club members' names, Latrice Griffin and Tanesha Wiggins study for a quiz.

Kelli Wilson and Derrick Parks strain to determine the names of the people in the club pictures.

Jerronne Coleman starts to copy a layout in final form.

CLASS OF '93!!!

Stepping Out Into the Real World

As we leave these Greyhound halls, we leave behind a legacy. We take with us all of the precious memories that this school holds that we will cherish for life.

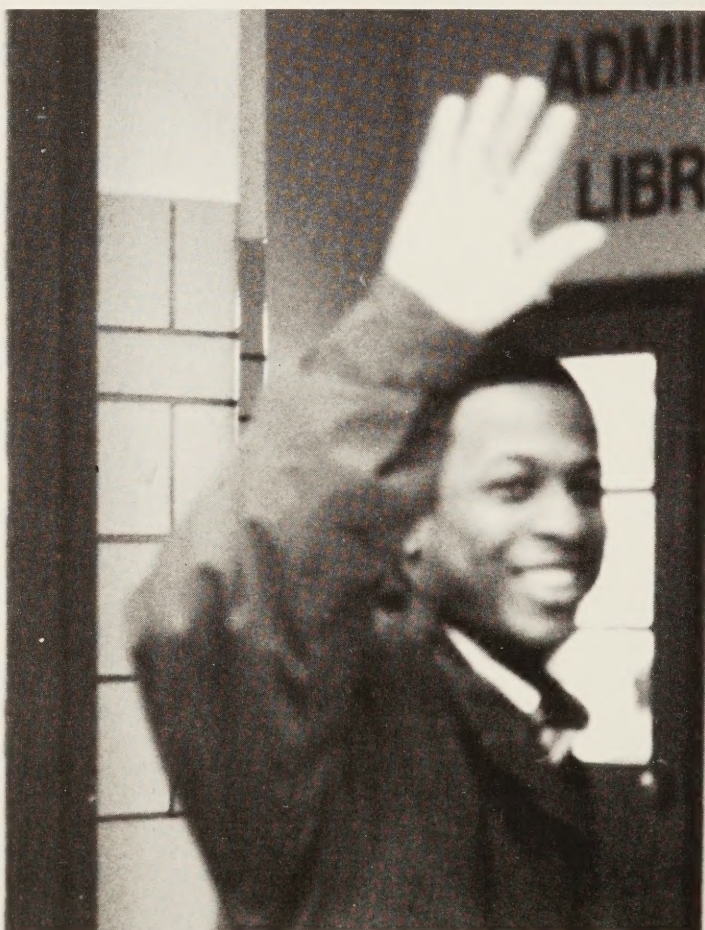

We won't let anything hold us back, for we don't settle for less than the best, which is why I. C. Norcom a step above the rest.

We're stepping out into the real world
A world full of hopes and dreams.
The key to tomorrow's future lies within our hands.

It's all up to us now.
We can only go forward in life.
There's no turning back.

We're scared and afraid
Of what we have to face.
